State Spotlights

Merck, a research-based pharmaceutical and healthcare company based in Kenilworth, achieved a more than six percent reduction in energy intensity for U.S. facilities in 2016, earning ENERGY STAR certification for one manufacturing plant and four office buildings.

"Merck is proud of our partnership with ENERGY STAR, because it helps us promote our energy program and provides guidance to use energy more efficiently." – Don Watson, Vice President, Global Workplace & Enterprise Services, Merck

Allergan, a diversified global pharmaceutical company in Parsippany, NJ, achieved more than a seven-percent energy intensity improvement for U.S. operations in 2016. Also in 2016, Allergan conducted an energy treasure hunt using ENERGY STAR guidance at a major manufacturing site that identified savings of nearly 24 percent of the site's current usage.

"It's hard to overstate the value Panasonic places on our partnership with ENERGY STAR. We are so incredibly proud to be recognized by the EPA for the seventh consecutive year. This award is emblematic of our shared vision to create a healthier, more energy efficient environment through our commitment to sustainable products and innovation." – Patricia Monks, Product Manager, Panasonic
